

Age Boom Academy 2023

Raising the Roof: America's Housing Crisis and Our Longer Lives

2023 Fellow Bios

With thanks to our funder:

Fellows

Sally Abrahms is a freelance writer (Time, Newsweek, The Wall Street Journal, AARP, Next Avenue, USA Today, The Boston Globe, Forbes, The Washington Post) with a focus on boomer/senior housing, 50+ caregiving, aging in place technology, livable communities, and intergenerational initiatives. She is the author of two books and a contributor to four. These include two editions of AARP's Where We Live for All Ages. For more than two years, Sally also wrote a weekly AARP blog for family caregivers.

As a boomer, spouse, grandmother, and former caregiver to parents and in-laws, she understands the issues she writes about. (Sally spent one month living in her mother's senior living community while her mother was in the hospital and rehab.)

This is her second Age Boom Academy fellowship; her first was 20 years ago. She has also received fellowships from the Gerontological Society of America and the Association of Health Care Journalists.

Last December, Sally finished her term on the board of the American Society of Journalists and Authors. She is currently a Fellow in Social Innovation at Babson College helping students better understand the aging space.

Twitter | X: @sallyabrahms

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/sallyabrahms/>

Aisha Adkins, MPA, CNP, is a writer, speaker, caregiver, and organizer residing on unceded Cherokee Nation territory in Atlanta, GA. She is passionate about building an equitable, inclusive, and comprehensive public health and care infrastructure using storytelling, culture change, and policy change. Aisha combines her lived experience as a full-time caregiver with her skills as a researcher to bring light to unique challenges facing Black millennial caregivers, including unequal access to resources and mental health. Her versatility has enabled her to publish works in both academic journals, including Nursing Administration Quarterly and Generations Journal, and the popular publications Thrive Global, Yes!, Order of Good Death, and The Conversation Project. Aisha graduated from the Andrew Young School of Public Studies at Georgia State University in 2020. She currently sits on the board of Alter Dementia and the Georgia Gerontology Society and organizes as the Constituency Engagement Manager for Caring Across Generations.

Website: aishaadkins.com

Twitter | X: @aishaadkins

Morgan Baskin is the housing and development reporter at DCist/WAMU 88.5, where she covers everything from the degradation of public housing and social service programs to the rental housing market and urban growth. She was previously the housing reporter at Washington City Paper, where she was recognized by the Association of Alternative Newsmedia for beat coverage of housing policy in Washington, DC.

She is enthusiastic about government accountability reporting and aims to explore the interplay between housing policy and social welfare – particularly within low-income and vulnerable communities.

Morgan covered politics and the Trump administration for VICE and worked as a print fact-checker and writer at Pacific Standard Magazine, where she also wrote about the natural environment and urban design. Morgan's work has been supported by the Fund for Investigative Journalism and SpotlightDC. She has written about social policy for Mother Jones, Washington Post Magazine, TalkPoverty, and The New Republic, among other outlets.

Twitter | X: @mhbaskin

Ian Bradley is a Tennessee-based journalist who covers regional growth, housing, and banking for the Nashville Business Journal. He started his career as reporter for The Acorn Newspaper in his hometown of Westlake Village, in southern California. In California, he covered stories ranging from features to breaking news pieces, most notably the Woolsey fire and Kobe Bryant's helicopter crash. Due to the high costs and low availability of housing in the region, he opted to spend two of his four years at that paper living in a 2006 Ford E-250. The experience fueled his passion for covering housing and development, especially as they relate to walkable, mixed-use communities that make housing more affordable for owners and first-time buyers alike. Moving to Nashville – a city where the cost of living is rapidly rising – furthered his commitment to highlighting the challenges of building housing and providing access to low-income or unhoused residents. Ian is a graduate of Humboldt State University and a recipient of multiple California Newspaper Publishers Awards.

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/ian-bradley-6054461b0/>

Khristopher J. Brooks is an award-winning journalist and professor with more than 15 years of experience in breaking news, enterprise stories, and multimedia storytelling. He writes about housing, the business of sports, economic disparities, bankruptcy, and other money-related topics for CBS News. Prior to joining CBS MoneyWatch, Khristopher worked for newspapers and websites in New York, Florida, Nebraska, and Michigan. He covered local government for Newsday and startups/entrepreneurship for the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle. Khristopher also covered higher education for the Omaha World-Herald, Florida Times-Union, and Bristol (VA) Herald Courier. Khristopher has won several state awards for his education reporting and feature writing. He is a member of the National Association of Black Journalists and the Society for the Advancement of Business Editing and Writing. Aside from reporting, Khristopher is also an adjunct assistant professor of Journalism at CUNY Hunter College in Manhattan. He previously taught business journalism at the College of Saint Rose in Albany and SUNY Purchase. A Detroit native, Khristopher holds bachelor's and master's degrees in Journalism from New York University and Central Michigan University. He lives in central New Jersey with his wife, Deprina, two cats (Crank and Staravia), and one son.

Twitter | X: @americanglow

Annemarie Cuccia is an accountability reporter at Street Sense Media, a street paper in Washington, DC. She focuses on the city's response to homelessness and poverty, reporting on encampments, voucher programs, and solutions to homelessness. She's passionate about person-centered reporting and connecting people experiencing homelessness to resources and opportunities for advocacy.

Annemarie is also a fellow with the Poynter-Koch Media and Journalism Fellowship and has won multiple awards for her reporting from DC's chapter of the Society for Professional Journalists. She graduated from Georgetown University in 2022 with a degree in International Relations and minors in Journalism and Spanish. During college, Annemarie interned at the Hill TV, Street Sense, and NonDoc, an online news source in her home state of Oklahoma. She also served as the editor-in-chief of the campus newsmagazine, the Georgetown Voice.

Twitter | X: @annemariemuccia

Veronica Dagher is an award-winning personal finance reporter for The Wall Street Journal, where she focuses on housing, retirement, and insurance. She's the author of the WSJ ebook Resilience, How 20 Ambitious Women Used Obstacles to Fuel Their Success. Veronica hosts videos for WSJ's social media accounts and is a regular guest on CBS, Fox, Yahoo! Finance, Cheddar, and other national media, where she speaks about personal finance, markets, and the economy. She created, hosted, and produced the nationally recognized WSJ podcast "Secrets of Wealthy Women," where she interviewed some of the most successful women in business, media, and entertainment. Veronica is a frequent radio guest, panel moderator, panelist, and keynote speaker. She received her MBA from Fordham University. She's a proud wife and mom.

Jonathan D. Epstein is a financial reporter at The Buffalo News, covering real estate and development amidst the ongoing resurgence of Buffalo. He is part of the Buffalo Next business desk and previously covered banking, insurance, and real estate.

He and a colleague broke the story surrounding a federal investigation of alleged commercial mortgage fraud at Rochester-based Morgan Communities, involving falsified loan documents for apartment projects in multiple states. He was also one of two reporters who worked on the paper's nationally award-winning four-part series, "The High Cost of Being Poor," and has received other statewide awards.

Prior to joining the News in January 2004, Jonathan spent six and a half years covering banking, credit cards, and insurance for The News Journal in Wilmington, DE. He began his career as a community banking reporter and deputy community banking editor for The American Banker, a daily trade newspaper, from July 1994 to August 1997.

A native of Schenectady, NY, Jonathan earned his bachelor's degree in History and Political Science from University of Rochester in 1993 and his master's in Print Journalism from the Columbia Journalism School in 1994. He was a Journalism fellow at the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at the University of Delaware in 1997.

Twitter | X: @jepsteinbuffalo

LinkedIn:

<https://www.linkedin.com/in/jonathan-epstein-7359321/>

Facebook:

<https://www.facebook.com/jonathan.epstein.96>

Stacey Freed was a senior editor at Remodeling, published by the Washington, DC-based Hanley Wood for nearly a decade. Since 2013 she has been freelancing for national trade and consumer publications. Her work focuses on all aspects of the built environment — from natural stone fireplace design to how to market industrialized construction, remodeling for pets, the uptick in ADUs, innovative models for senior housing, and more. In recent years, Stacey has become interested in housing affordability and the various ways construction professionals can help people remain in their communities.

Her work appears in AARP.org, USA Today, Forbes.com, Environments for Aging, Real Simple, Beautiful Kitchens & Baths, Realtor, This Old House, Professional Builder, Construction Dive, Trulia, and Zillow, among other places.

Stacey also is co-author of Hiking the Catskills and has won a Neal Award for specialized journalism and several awards from the American Society of Business Publications Editors. She is a board member and the treasurer of the American Society of Journalists and Authors.

Twitter | X: @sfreed

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/stacey-freed-0099573/>

Cynthia Greenlee, PhD, is a longtime award-winning journalist and African-Americanist legal historian based in North Carolina. She loves her hybrid career, and that both history and journalism give her professional reasons to indulge her natural nosiness. She currently works at The Guardian, where she commissions work about housing and food. Before that, she was senior editor at The Counter (a food and agriculture nonprofit newsroom) and Rewire, which covers reproductive health, rights, and justice. Her freelance work has appeared in The Atlantic, Elle, The Nation, The New York Times, Oxford American magazine, Smithsonian, Vox, The Washington Post, and others. As one of the country's leading voices on African-American foodways, Cynthia has also won a James Beard Foundation Award, the highest honor in US food writing. Her work was selected for three "Best American" volumes. She is also co-editor of The Echoing Ida Collection, an anthology of Black women and nonbinary people writing about reproductive justice. You can read her work at www.cynthiagreenlee.com. In her spare time, she gardens, makes ice cream, and spends too much time talking about her miniature pit bull and Maine coon cat.

Heidi Groover is a reporter at The Seattle Times covering real estate. Her work focuses on the Seattle area's ongoing housing crisis, landlord/tenant issues, and the local real estate market.

Twitter | X: @heidigroover

Jessica Hall has been a reporter for decades, covering everything from plane crashes to corporate earnings and mega-mergers. She currently covers retirement at MarketWatch. She previously worked for Mainebiz and the Portland Press Herald/Maine Sunday Telegram. She spent the bulk of her career at Reuters, covering mergers and acquisitions, telecommunications, and airlines. She started stringing for the Courier-Post at 18, covering cops and obits. Jessica graduated from Syracuse University with degrees in Magazine Journalism and Psychology.

Lisa Halverstadt is a senior investigative reporter for Voice of San Diego who has for years reported on the San Diego region's homelessness, housing, and behavioral health crises. She has produced high-impact investigations on topics including San Diego's homelessness response, city real estate transactions, and transit system fare enforcement that inspired change and reframed local policy debates. Lisa also served two stints as board president of the San Diego Pro Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, which has been named national large chapter of the year twice in recent history. Before joining Voice of San Diego, Lisa worked at The Arizona Republic, where she covered everything from public safety to a National Hockey League ownership saga with major financial implications for the city of Glendale, AZ. She is a 2008 graduate of Bowling Green State University in Ohio and grew up in Cincinnati.

Twitter | X: @LisaHalverstadt

Threads: @LisaHalverstadt

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/lisa-halverstadt-781a283/>

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/LisaHalverstadt>

Lillian (Lilly) Hernández Caraballo is a bilingual, multimedia journalist covering housing and homelessness for WMFE, Central Florida's NPR station, as a Report for America corps member. Before joining public radio, Lilly was an editor for the weekly newspaper Hometown News and an associate producer at Spectrum News 13 in a top 20 TV market. She graduated from the University of Central Florida in 2021 with a bachelor's degree in Journalism, a minor in Writing and Rhetoric, and a certification in Hispanic Media. While at UCF, Lilly served as editor-in-chief of NSM Today, the student news outlet, and interned with several organizations, including Univision Orlando, the Mississippi Center for Investigative Reporting, and WUCF, Central Florida's PBS station. At WUCF, she hosted, managed, and web produced the award-winning student project "The Road to Freedom Avenue: The Legacy of Harry T. and Harriette V. Moore." Her role in that production was instrumental in earning the organization a National Edward R. Murrow Award in 2022 for Excellence in Digital Reporting, among other accolades. Some of her passions include reporting on issues of climate, social, and economic justice, as well as government and politics.

Tony Hicks works at Bay City News/Local News Matters, where he covers Contra Costa County news and aging, and leads the Library Hub team. He previously worked for Bay Area News Group (East Bay Times, Oakland Tribune, San Jose Mercury News) for 22 years as an award-winning news and feature writer, columnist, and music and film critic. He has also written for Healthline, Berkeleyside, Diablo magazine, Riff magazine, Bay Area Parent, Parents Press, Oakland magazine, and BAM magazine. He grew up in the East Bay, attended SF State, and was the editor-in-chief of the Diablo Valley College Inquirer. He's the father of three daughters and a violent cat.

Twitter | X: @TonyBaloney1967

Debra Kamin covers real estate, culture, travel, and business for The New York Times. She is the recipient of multiple journalism prizes, including an award from the National Association of Travel Journalists and two Lowell Thomas Awards from the Society of American Travel Writers. Her work covering racism in the home-appraisal industry made her a finalist for the MOLLY National Journalism Prize and helped prompt the Biden administration to create a national task force on property appraisals.

Debra is a graduate of Skidmore College and the University of Chicago.

Lizzie Kane is a general assignment business reporter with a focus on affordable housing and residential real estate for the Chicago Tribune. Through her reporting, she strives to bring attention to how housing issues intersect with other topics such as race, gender, age, and health. Prior to her job at the Tribune, Lizzie was on the real estate team with Bloomberg, based in New York City. She also reported on housing issues while working for publications in Indianapolis, Charlotte, Atlanta, and Baltimore. Lizzie graduated with a degree in Sociology from Davidson College and has won awards for her journalism work from the Maryland-Delaware-DC Press Association.

Twitter | X: @lizzie_kane17

Lorie Konish is a reporter covering personal finance at CNBC.com with an emphasis on retirement issues. Prior to joining CNBC, Lorie worked as an editor at InvestmentNews and On Wall Street covering issues affecting financial advisers and their clients. She has also written for Dow Jones and the Associated Press. Lorie earned her bachelor's degree from Rutgers University and a master's in Journalism from the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University. She is currently a candidate for a master's in Personal Financial Planning from the College for Financial Planning. In her downtime, Lorie enjoys running and traveling.

Brooke Kushwaha is a reporter for the Vineyard Gazette and the associate editor of its sister publication, Martha's Vineyard Magazine. She covers housing, conservation, immigration, and a variety of other local issues for both publications. Her work has also appeared in Teen Vogue and The New York Times, where she assisted in the breaking news coverage of the 49 Venezuelan migrants who had been flown to the Vineyard in September 2022. When she's not writing or editing, she can be found kayaking around much larger boats in Edgartown Harbor.

Twitter | X: @BrookeKushwaha

Bailey Loosemore is a reporter at The Courier Journal, where she focuses on covering people and issues that shape the Louisville community, including housing shortages and racial injustice. She is a two-time Pulitzer Prize finalist for her work covering 2020's Breonna Taylor protests and helps lead the CJ's mobile newsroom, which engages residents in underserved parts of the community. Ask her about visiting 29 National Parks.

Twitter | X: @bloosemore

LinkedIn: <http://www.linkedin.com/in/bailey-loosemore-3499b655>

Instagram: @bloosemore_CJ

D. Kevin McNeir (Dominic) is an award-winning journalist with more than 25 years of service, primarily for the Black Press (NNPA). Based in Washington, DC, he provides investigative reports, commentaries, and content writing (entertainment, politics, sports, business, faith, and health) for non-profits and publications throughout the US, including DCTRENDING and New Jersey Urban News. During his career, he has held almost every possible position in the newsroom including beat reporter, staff/senior writer, and copy/managing/senior editor for media outlets that include The Washington Informer, The Miami Times, The Atlanta Voice, N'DIGO (Chicago), The Michigan Chronicle, and The Grand Rapids Times.

In June 2021 and 2023, he was chosen as a finalist for Weekly Newspaper, Commentary & Criticism, Society of Professional Journalists, Washington, DC. Pro Chapter, for his branded column "The World According to Dominic." He was a winner in the same category in 2022 and 2020 and a finalist for Weekly Newspaper, Sports, in 2022.

A native of Detroit, a college and K-12 instructor, and a former pastor/vocalist and ordained elder in the United Methodist Church, Kevin matriculated at the University of Michigan (Bachelor of Arts, English/Marketing), Emory University (Master of Divinity, magna cum laude), and Princeton Theological Seminary (Master of Divinity, PhD candidate).

Twitter | X: @mcneirdk

LinkedIn: <http://www.linkedin.com/in/d-kevin-mcneir-50846b32>

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/WIEditorDKevinMcNeir2016/>

Alexa Mikhail is a New York-based health and wellness reporter on Fortune's Well team covering workplace wellness, mental health, aging and longevity, and more. Alexa recently moderated at Fortune's Most Powerful Women Next Generation conference and Fortune's Brainstorm Health conference, covering the healthcare staffing shortage and women's healthcare. She also served as a fellow in the National Press Institute's Reporting on Aging Fellowship in the Fall of 2022. Prior to her role at Fortune, Alexa worked in video production at CNN as part of the CNN+ launch. Her byline has appeared in The 19th, The Washington Post, and Good Morning America. She is a graduate of Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism. Follow all of Alexa's stories here.

Website: alexamikhail.com

Twitter | X: @MikhailAlexa

LinkedIn: <http://www.linkedin.com/in/alexamikhail>

Ashley Milne-Tyte is a freelance journalist based on Long Island. She began her career in radio in the early 2000s as an intern at WNYC, New York City's public radio station. For seven years she was a reporter for Marketplace, the public radio business show, where she covered everything from Wall Street to an order of Franciscan friars that was recruiting through subway ads.

In 2012, she created The Broad Experience, her podcast on women and the workplace, which was one of the first podcasts to take a lens to this topic. The Guardian, Economist, and Financial Times have all praised the show. Ashley produced and hosted the podcast alongside other podcast work for brands, nonprofits, and foundations, including Tight Knit, an eight-part series on family caregivers. She has taught radio storytelling at Columbia Journalism School and podcasting at Stonybrook University.

In 2023, after a decade of work on The Broad Experience, Ashley retired the podcast and pivoted to focus on stories about older adults – a group that's always been a big part of her life. So far, her pieces have been featured on Marketplace, NPR, and Next Avenue.

Website: ashleymilnetyte.com

Twitter | X: @ashleymilnetyte

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/ashleymilnetyte/>

Megan Myscofski is a public health and equity reporter at KUNM in New Mexico, where she often explores water and housing issues as they relate to her beat. She previously worked as a business and economics reporter for Arizona Public Media in Tucson. There, she reported, produced, and hosted Tapped, a narrative podcast about the cost of drought in the Southwest, telling the story of how agriculture, housing, infrastructure, border issues, and more all play a role in the story of aridification. She also reported and hosted with Montana Public Radio and interned with the climate podcast Threshold.

Her work has been featured on NPR, Marketplace and the Society of Environmental Journalists' digital news magazine. Megan holds a master's degree in Business and Economics Reporting from the Newmark School of Journalism at CUNY and a bachelor's degree in Comparative Literature from NYU. She had her first audio journalism internship as a high school exchange student in Essen, Germany.

Website: <https://www.meganmyscofski.com/>

Twitter | X: @megmyscofski

Threads: @megmyscofski

LinkedIn: <http://www.linkedin.com/inmegan-myscofski-8511b5137>

Natalie Orenstein is the housing and homelessness reporter for The Oaklandside, a nonprofit newsroom in Oakland, CA. She covers the ins and outs of local housing policy and its impacts on renters, homeowners, and people living without permanent housing. She aims to balance coverage of hardships and systemic problems with practical resource guides and stories highlighting creative solutions to the overlapping housing and homelessness crises. She writes the popular “Oakland Home Histories” series, tracing the colorful past lives of local buildings and neighborhoods based on pitches from their residents.

Natalie was previously on staff at Berkeleyside, where her reporting on the legacy of school desegregation received recognition from the Society of Professional Journalists NorCal and the Education Writers Association. Natalie grew up in the Bay Area and is a graduate of Pomona College. She’s a founding member of the Cityside Guild, a new union representing journalists at The Oaklandside and Berkeleyside.

Twitter | X: @nat_orenstein

Nushrat Rahman is a reporter at the Detroit Free Press, covering economic mobility, including housing, affordability, and inequities that prevent low-income families from achieving financial stability, with a laser focus on Detroit. She also works with the nonprofit newsroom BridgeDetroit, which focuses on community-based journalism. Her coverage seeks to untangle big issues while getting practical information into the hands of Detroiters. She has written about how grassroots groups went door to door to let Detroiters know about ways to avoid eviction throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. She has dug into the implications of the affordable-housing shortage in Michigan for vulnerable communities, the subpar conditions of rental housing in Detroit, and the homelessness response system in the city. Nushrat is a firm believer in journalism that holds power to account, tells on-the-ground stories rooted in community, and connects readers to resources. Nushrat has written for local Detroit publications, including Hour Detroit, Model D, and Tostada Magazine. Her words have appeared in The New York Times, as a part of a weekly newsletter for college students and recent graduates. Nushrat is a graduate of Columbia Journalism School and Wayne State University. She’s a former Report for America corps member.

Twitter | X: @NushratR

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/nushratrahman/>

Caitlin Reilly is a journalist based in Washington, DC, covering banking and housing policy on Capitol Hill for CQ Roll Call. She has covered Congress' efforts to grapple with the housing shortage, holes in the housing safety net, and the legacy of racism in US housing policy. Before joining Roll Call, she covered public health, education, race, and poverty for Inside Philanthropy and tax and labor law for Bloomberg Industry Group. She is a member of the National Press Club. She graduated with honors from Harvard University.

Twitter | X: @reilly_cait
Bluesky: @creilly

Charlene Rhinehart is an award-winning speaker, journalist, and certified public accountant. During the pandemic, she was selected as one of 25 journalists to work with Facebook's new Bulletin platform and participate in CUNY's Jumpstart Program for Bulletin writers. Charlene later founded ChicagoSouthsider.com—a Facebook Bulletin newsletter-turned-community news site that helps "unlock the best of Chicago's South Side, one block at a time." She reaches over 6,000 subscribers every week with her community newsletter while she showcases the history of Chicago's South Side through Facebook Live videos. In 2023, Charlene was chosen as one of 10 fellows from around the world to participate in the Solutions Journalism Network LEDE Fellowship, which focuses on expanding audience access to solutions content. Previously, she was selected as a City Bureau Reporting Fellow, where she focused on housing on the South Side of Chicago. In 2018, she passed the Illinois real estate exam to deepen her understanding of housing laws in the state. Charlene is currently an editor at GoodRx, where she focuses on the intersection between healthcare and personal finance.

Twitter | X: @CharRhinehart
LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/charlenerhinehart/>

Helen Rummel is a reporter in Phoenix, covering homelessness and housing insecurity for The Arizona Republic. She began working for the publication in June as a Pulliam Fellow covering equity issues. Her work focuses on Phoenix's growing housing crisis and the way it has impacted vulnerable communities as well as the nonprofits looking to serve them. Before coming to The Arizona Republic, Helen interned for Chalkbeat Indiana and the Thomson Foundation. While at Indiana University, she served as the editor-in-chief of the Indiana Daily Student, the school's independent student newspaper. Helen is a member of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists and graduated with a degree in Journalism in May 2023.

Sandra Sadek is a Report for America corps member, covering growth for the Fort Worth Report. Her approach to Journalism is to focus on the people directly impacted by the issues while highlighting potential solutions. Over the past year and a half with the Report, she has been covering the city's housing crisis and how officials are addressing the growing demand for affordable and safe living conditions. Most recently, she looked into the city's lack of affordable housing for seniors and the barriers hindering the development and construction of apartments for older residents.

Originally from Houston, she graduated from Texas State University where she studied Journalism and International Relations.

Twitter | X: @ssadek19

Gregory Schmidt covers residential real estate for the Business desk at The New York Times and is the editor of “Square Feet,” a weekly column focused on trends in commercial real estate. He became keenly aware of the nation’s housing crisis while reporting for the Real Estate desk at The Times, where he wrote about the Stonewall House, a housing development in Brooklyn run by SAGE, a New York advocacy group for LGBTQ older adults. Afterward, he reported from the housing court in the Bronx, talking to New York residents about how they were coping with the end of the eviction moratorium in New York. Since moving back to the Business desk, he has written about stagnation in the housing market. Before coming to The Times in 2007, he worked as an editor on the Business desk at The Miami Herald for seven years. He has a bachelor’s degree in Writing from the University of Tampa and a master’s degree in Mass Communications from the University of Florida.

Twitter | X: @GregoryNYC

Anita Snow is a senior writer and former foreign correspondent covering national issues from the Southwest for the Associated Press. Based in Phoenix, Anita is a Spanish-speaker who focuses on immigration and giving voice to the voiceless, especially among the region’s Hispanics and Native Americans. Coverage interests include homelessness and the nation’s low-income housing crisis, poverty, food insecurity, and health equity challenges faced by a growing cohort of older Americans. Anita worked for about 25 years in Latin America, as a Mexico City-based correspondent and news editor and as Havana bureau chief. She also covered the United Nations from New York. Anita has a bachelor’s degree in Communications from California State University, Fullerton; a master’s degree in Latin American and Caribbean Studies from New York University; and an MFA in Creative Nonfiction from Goucher College. Anita was awarded a 2009-10 Nieman Fellowship at Harvard University. She received a 2019 Dart Center fellowship for reporting on child refugees and a 2021 Journalists in Aging fellowship from the Gerontological Society of America. In addition to her journalism, Anita is writing a memoir about growing up with a schizophrenic brother.

Twitter | X: @asnowreports

Annmarie Timmins is a senior reporter for the New Hampshire Bulletin who covers health, aging, and state policy with a focus on the safety net programs intended to protect the state's most vulnerable people.

Prior to helping launch the Bulletin, a nonprofit news site in the States Newsroom network, in 2021, Annmarie worked as a reporter and editor at the Concord Monitor for more than 20 years.

In 2022, she was selected for “AARP’s Living Longer: The New Age for Aging” journalism fellowship. That same year, she participated in the Journalists in Aging Fellows Program hosted by The Gerontological Society of America and the Journalists Network on Generations.

Annmarie spent a year at Harvard on a Nieman journalism fellowship studying the intersection of the legal system and mental illness. She has taught Journalism at the University of New Hampshire and writing at the Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications. Annmarie earned a degree in Journalism from the University of New Hampshire, has presented seminars on the Right-to-Know law, and is an officer in the New Hampshire Press Association.

Twitter | X: @annmarietimmins

Tatyana Turner is a New York City-based journalist reporting on the local public housing authority for City Limits. As a NYC Housing Authority (NYCHA) reporter, Tatyana covers a range of topics including disinvestment and rehabilitation efforts within the housing authority. She aims to focus on matters related to resource accessibility and affordability for senior residents. Tatyana previously worked for the Chicago Tribune as a breaking news reporter, and is an alumnus of the Report for America program, where she covered the Black Life and Culture beat for the Baltimore Sun. She graduated from Columbia Journalism School in May 2020.

Twitter | X: @tatyanaacturner

Abby Vesoulis is a national politics reporter for the Washington, DC, bureau of Mother Jones, where she writes about everything from healthcare and housing policy to elections. She previously covered Congress and economic policy as a staff writer for Time Magazine and was a member of the National Press Foundation's 2021 Paul Miller Washington Reporting Fellowship cohort. Abby graduated summa cum laude from Ohio State University with degrees in Journalism and Political Science and was twice named the top scholar in the school's Journalism program.

Twitter | X: @abbyvesoulis

Tess Vrbin is an Arkansas-based reporter with a focus on housing, healthcare, LGBTQ+ issues and how the decisions made by people with power affect everyday Arkansans. She aims to put the spotlight on people and communities that history has excluded or dehumanized, such as people with disabilities and transgender people. Her first job after college was as a one-woman bureau at The Commercial Dispatch in Mississippi, covering all things Starkville and Oktibbeha County, from how local school districts handled the COVID-19 pandemic to a dam that nearly flooded a neighborhood. She came to the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette in 2021 and won awards for her reporting on the aftermath of tornadoes and flash floods in rural corners of the state. Since joining the Arkansas Advocate, she has relentlessly reported on local and state efforts to keep books with LGBTQ+ themes out of children's reach in libraries. She also covered the first-of-its-kind federal trial against the Arkansas ban on gender-affirming healthcare for transgender minors and the judge's subsequent decision to strike down the law. She graduated in 2019 from the Missouri School of Journalism, with a focus on Multimedia Investigative Reporting, and minored in English, Spanish, and Political Science.

Twitter | X: @tess_m_vrbin